An amendment that sought to broaden the definition of "agent of a foreign power";

An amendment that sought to require the President to inform the House and Senate Intelligence Committees when he has reason to believe that an individual with diplomatic immunity is engaging in electronic surveillance in the United States, and to also inform the target of the surveillance and the foreign power if he determines that to do so would not cause serious damage to national security (rejected by a recorded vote of 154 ayes to 230 noes, Roll No. 733);

An amendment that sought to prohibit the bill from becoming effective until the President certifies that no individual with diplomatic immunity is engaged in electronic surveillance in the United States;

An amendment that sought to terminate the provisions in the bill five years after the date of enactment (rejected by a division vote of 21 ayes to 28 noes);

An amendment in the nature of a substitute to the committee substitute (text of H.R. 13442) that, among other things, sought to strike the requirement for obtaining a warrant for electronic surveillance; strike the criminal standard for surveillance of United States persons; and allow surveillance of a United States person if it was certified by the President, the Attorney General, and an executive branch office confirmed by the Senate (rejected by a recorded vote of 128 ayes to 249 noes, Roll No. 734); and

An amendment to the previous substitute that sought to require an annual report by the Attorney General on the total number of applications for orders approving electronic surveillance and the total number of orders granted or denied; and to require a report to the appropriate Member of Congress or congressional committee of any foreign government's attempt to improperly influence Congress, suborn individual Members, or threaten a Member. A point of order against this amendment was overruled.
